Shooting Coyotes over Bait

Coyotes are often heard but seldom seen. Being a nocturnal predator chances of killing a coyote are reduced because of visability at night.

To better the chances of killing more coyotes baiting should be allowed. Baiting coyotes might entice coyotes to appear more often during daylight hours.

Baiting could be done with wild or agricultural animal carcasses. This would mean car killed deer or dead livestock. Using car kill deer would also benefit by cleaning up unsightly messes along roadways.

By shooting more coyotes during daylight hours it might reduce firearm accidents at night. Visibility being the main factor.

Coyotes need to be harvested year around. Baiting should also be allowed year around. The only exception would be during the gun deer and muzzleloader season north of Highway 64.

For use on private land only.
