Subject:	The Foxconn Business Plant Lake Michigan diversion proposal of Great Lakes water to Pleasant Prairie, WI
Date:	Monday, March 19, 2018 6:06:42 PM

Adam Friehoefer, WI. DNR Chief of Water Use-

Let us review the Waukesha diversion for a minute. The SEWRPC recommendation (Mike Hahn) accepted by the WI DNR for this diversion proposal included the whole Town of Waukesha - 36 square miles, parts of the Village of Summit, Parts of Delafield and Pewaukee. In the the end the Great Lakes provinces Governors recognized that the applicant - The Waukesha Water utility served about 40,000 rate payers in its original approx 36 mile square area.

For the new Foxconn water diversion application to access lake Michigan water Foxconn should be the applicant. The Racine water utility (the current applicant) does not represent the proposed service area which is outside the basin and in the Town of Peasant Prairie. Pleasant Prairie above the continental divided needs to make their case for this dire need diversion of water themselves. Diversion waters from the Great lakes are for human beings not for businesses. Foxconn needs to build their plant wholly within the Great Lake Basin .

Thirdly, Foxconn a company with a history of documented production of toxic water discharges has not provided a template to the DNR & you Adam on how to filter out and properly dispose of these poisons.
