To Whom it May Concern,

I am concerned about the current plan to divert so much water. I think FoxConn should be responsible for coming up with ways to recycle the water on site, use more greywater systems and other ways to reduce their need for Lake Michigan water. Additionally strict standards (more than are currently upheld) must be applied since this is almost exclusively for the benefit of a private company unlike the Waukesha diversion that benefits people who don't have many sources of safe water. I am concerned about the contamination of the water with heavy metals, solvents and other chemicals from the industrial process. Please place strict standards on the water return.
