Subject:	FoxConn water permit--Consider the environment first, not big business nor politics.

To whom it may concern:

Many experts say water, and clean water, are becoming the greatest environmental concerns facing us, as American citizens and as global citizens. FoxConn should not be getting special treatment from the DNR. Please bring back the strong environmental reputation the Wisconsin DNR once had, before it became a puppet of business and politicians.

Water belongs to all of us and needs to be used wisely. Estimates are that of the 7 million gallons a day that FoxConn needs, only about 61% will be returned to the lake. We do not know what chemicals or substances FoxConn will be introducing into the water, nor how they plan to clean the water before returning it to the lake.

I know there are good people, true environmental stewards, still working for the DNR, and I hope their voices are heard and lead to good policy.

Thank you.
