It is my opinion, as a Wisconsin resident, a former business owner and property owner, that our state is paving the road to destruction with this whole plan. We have worked for generations to assure our citizens that we will not sacrifice their safety, health, natural resources and the attractiveness of our beautiful state to the short term interests of business and industry. This has been a very hard fight, as there are so many people in the world who care only to make money on their watch and care little for the future consequences. We see the desecration of the landscape and read of the suffering due to pollution and destruction our citizens endure due to these powerful individuals and the corporations they control.

The degree to which all provisions to protect the wetlands of this area and now the need for enormous amounts of water should indicate to anyone with a brain and a heart that this project will be much more of a detriment to our state and our citizens than the limited number of jobs for a limited number of years justifies. These technologies are changing at a rate that can hardly be tracked. Before the plant is even built there will be new devices supplanting what the factory was designed for. There is absolutely no guaranty that it will last more than a decade. In the meantime precedents will have been set that will lead to the increasing degradation of the one thing that makes Wisconsin a major destination - its pristine natural beauty.

Don't let Wisconsin go down the drain!
