Question: Should the WDNR make a rule that would encourage or demand that water craft used on Lake Michigan ^{or} Lake Superior be washed with pressured soapy water before they are used on inland waters?

Invasive exotic plants, animals, and biologicals have been and are introduced into the Great Lakes on an alarming rate. Many of these have the potential to destroy fisheries on inland lakes. The plant, EWM, is causing havoc with many inland lakes causing recreational problems and expense on riparian land owners. There is a question as to how many invasive exotics that the inland lakes can content with and remain viable bodies for fisheries and recreation.
