INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is intended for use by those aquatic biologists who work primarily on Wisconsin's Fox River system. Geographically, the area covered includes the Fox River, its watershed, and major lakes connected to the stream. Because of vast differences in characteristics references to the Wolf River system, a major tributary to the Fox are not included here.

The bibliography is "selected" in the sense that it is not a complete listing of references pertaining to the Fox River system. For example, the sections on history and geology-geography contain mostly general references that apply to the whole area or large governmental units (i.e. counties). References alluding to individual cities, locals, or people are excluded. The section on biology is most complete and contains references covering many specific phases of aquatic biology excluding references specifically relating to waterfowl and wildlife. The miscellaneous section contains a conglomeration of references that could not easily be categorized under other headings.

References listed can generally be found in major libraries around the state or at one of the following:

Biology Department Library
University of Wisconsin
Madison, Wisconsin

Polk Memorial Library
Wisconsin State University
Oshkosh, Wisconsin

Memorial Library
University of Wisconsin

Oshkosh, Wisconsin

This bibliography was compiled as part of the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources' Lake and Stream Classification Project. Grateful appreciation is extended to Mrs. Simpson of the Oshkosh Public Library who provided many of the historical references.

A LIST OF COMMON NAMES AND THEIR MEANING*

French:

- Dutte des Morts - "Hill of the dead"
Calumet--Chalemet - "Little reed" "Pipe of peace"
Fond du Lac - "end of the lake"

Indian:

- Menasha - "thorn" "island"
Neenah - "water"
Omro - named for Charles Omro, a half-breed trader.
Oshkosh - named for Chief Oshkosh
Outagamie - "people on the other shore"
Poygan - "pipe"
Poysippi - "running into the lake"
Puckaway - "cattail flag"
Winnebago - "fetid water" "stinking water"
Winneconno - "dirty place"
Wisconsin - formerly "Wishkonsing" "Wishkingsing" "Ouisconsin" meaning "swift water". It is also said to refer to holes in banks where birds live.
