

Back

---

State honors Casaloma Development Corp. for green development

Advertisement

The Post-Crescent May 16, 2007

On the Web

To learn more about the state DNR's Green Tier program visit <http://dnr.wi.gov/>

Casaloma Development Corp. of Appleton will be recognized Thursday for being the first participant in the state's EccoDev Charter.

The state Department of Natural Resources Secretary Scott Hassett will honor Leon Church, president of Casaloma Development Corp., and his company at the Valley Home Builders Association Office in Appleton for taking part in the Green Tier program. Church was the first to sign the charter in 2005.

Casaloma Development Corp. is behind The Cottages at Woodside Green in Neenah, a project that maximizes energy efficient construction and products as well as using native Wisconsin plants and grasses in landscaping. The project also will feature new technology for storm water management.

Green Tier is a state program that gives environmentally innovative companies support for going beyond compliance with minimum regulatory standards. This includes providing the participating companies with assistance to find collaborative contracts, charters and environmental management systems.