

Consulting Engineers for Water Quality Design
Prepared by Brian J. Holmes, Extension Agricultural Engineer
College of Agricultural and Life Sciences
University of Wisconsin-Madison

This list is intended for those seeking a consultant to help plan pollution control facilities. Each consultant has strengths and limitations. Discuss your needs with them to determine if they can assist. To establish a consultant's credibility, have him/her provide references and contact those references. Remember, a consultant paid by you should work for you. Some consultants and salespeople represent product lines which may influence their designs. This is only a partial list of engineers who can design and supervise construction of water quality improvement projects on farms. Other engineers may be available to do this kind of work. The designation of P.E. means professional engineer. These engineers have proven themselves by passing an examination. If you are aware of a consultant who should be on this list or if you are interested in having your name on this list, please contact me with the name, address, telephone number and e-mail address.
