County Deer Advisory Councils

To provide a format for people to get more involved and take ownership of deer issues at the local level; beginning in 2014, each county in Wisconsin will delegate a deer advisory council to provide input on deer management for the county. Membership will consist of stakeholder groups drawn from the general public and will include:

- at least three members with hunter credentials;
- one Conservation Congress member; and
- one Chippewa Tribe member.

In addition, depending on the prominence of certain economic activities, councils in each county may include professionals in:

- agriculture;
- forestry;
- urban;
- transportation; and
- tourism.

Councils will work with local department staff to schedule meetings, find committee representatives and provide community outreach. Meetings will involve reviewing deer population data, setting antlerless quotas and structuring hunting seasons. These topics will be set and reviewed every three years. The level of independence granted to each council in setting these parameters is such that adjacent counties may differ substantially in the type and timing of deer seasons that they offer, population objectives that are in effect and number of bonus antlerless permits available.

County Deer Advisory Council information

Wisconsin has long been known as one of the most publicly-driven deer management programs in the country. That has become even more so in recent years as thousands of volunteers have helped the DNR gather deer herd information by being active participants in deer research projects and observation data collection through Operation Deer Watch and on-line field observation surveys.

Here we have provided a resource where you can access information about the deer advisory council in your county including meeting dates and times and past meeting minutes.

Thank you again for your interest, and for being a part of the Wisconsin deer hunting tradition!
