Black Bear Baiting Regulations

Wisconsin's lengthy, liberal bear baiting rules allow 5.5 months of baiting an unlimited number of bait stations. In sharp contrast, Minnesota and Michigan limit bear baiting to 3 tended bait stations per registered hunter for 2 months. Stations may be moved upon submission of a relocation form to the DNR.

Problem: Wisconsin has NO baiting registration requirements. Our wardens admit they cannot devote time or manpower needed to investigate the number of baiting violations submitted to the DNR hotline. The long baiting season increases the chances of disease transmission among myriad wildlife feeding at these stations all summer long, bear-hound-wolf conflicts, and bear habituation to foods found among humans at campgrounds and homes.

States that mandate fixed identification of bear bait stations include a combination of the following: GPS coordinates, name, address, driver's license or DNR hunting license number, township section and range, and signage. Required identification results in more hunter accountability and allows wardens to swiftly identify violations. A shorter baiting season decreases the number of conflicts around these stations and encourages bears to eat a natural diet readily available in the woods where they belong.

Resolution: Be it resolved on April 12, 2021, that the Conservation Congress in Outagamie County work with the Wisconsin DNR to amend Wisconsin's black bear baiting regulations through the introduction of rule changes to require that bear bait sites be identified and to limit baiting to no earlier than thirty days prior to bear hunting season.
